Honey Show Stewarding –A Cautionary Tale

Having stewarded for several years the procedure becomes fairly routine.

Duties:

- 1) Remind the Judge, booked months before, of the date (sometimes hunt around for a substitute if said Judge has sudden more important engagement)
- 2) On the day lay out class labels and check exhibits are in correct classes. Help Novices over their nerves.
- 3) Provide all items needed for judging: Pen, paper, spoons for tasting, torch for assessing honey clarity, large knife for cutting honey cakes, and not forgetting a small glass for mead tasting.
- 4) Provide a suitable bag for transporting the equipment.

After the Show "Thank goodness that is over" go home and look forward to a holiday but remember to empty the bag used for stewarding duties completely. Recently an experienced steward going through airport security on her way to Vancouver was apprehended, the x-ray scanner having detected a large kitchen knife in her carry-on bag. Luckily to support her protestations of innocence the bag also contained labels for various honey classes.

She was released after a short detention vowing never to steward again.

Honey Labelling

If you have a honey surplus which you intend to sell to the public this year, there are a few rules which you must follow before setting out your stall.

First of all, remember that your label must not mislead. That lovely picture of the Heather moors, taken while on holiday, will not be a suitable background to your label unless the honey can be guaranteed to be pure heather honey. "Floral honey" or "Blossom honey" or just "Honey" are safe descriptions.

Weight must be displayed in metric measures first and size matters; for a 454gm jar the font must be at least 4mm high. You can add imperial measures but they must come after the metric weight. Your name and address must be put on the label as well as a separate note of "Country of Origin". There must be a "Best before" date( choose your own!) and finally a lot number if you are selling through a third party, and not just from your own front door. Good luck!

Vision from the BBKA: A Britain Buzzing with Honey Bees

The BBKA have unveiled their "Mission Statement"

For the next five years the BBKA will aim to create a thriving honey bee population beekeepers, achieved by better skilled working with an informed public and supported by a responsible agro-industry to the benefit of the environment and people. The BBKA abandoned the Forum Day in favour of a Chairman's Day this year and this took place on 14th September at Stoneleigh. The Trustees expressed the hope that the Chairman's Day would create a better conduit for the exchange of ideas between the BBKA and Area Associations.

From the CBT 50 years ago What is a Skep?

A skep is an ancient measure containing 16 pecks. A Penrith peck was slightly larger than a Winchester peck which ultimately became an Imperial peck!

Sixteen pecks of oats, Penrith measure weighed 26 stones. Sixteen pecks of oats Winchester measure weighed 24 stones.

Skeps were thus the same as quarters and prior to 1916 in these parts were sold by the Reception 9.00am quarter of 26 stones. Wheat, barley and rye were sold by the Carlisle bushel. A Carlisle bushel was equivalent to three Winchester bushels. CBT Sept 1963

But what is a Bushel? Thank goodness for Metric measures. Ed
